Functions

≡ Chapter No.	5
⌄ Status	Completed

▼ When using a function, the user does not need to know how the function is processing the data and returning the result

- The user only needs to know that the function has this specific purpose

- This idea is called abstraction, where certain details are hidden from the user